Great excitement in Carrick on Suir as Cathaoirleach warmly welcomes Minister Humphreys

The 10th November 2022 will go down in the annals as a truly momentous day for Carrick on Suir with the announcement by Minister Heather Humphreys of a grant of €14.39 million under her department's Rural Regeneration and Development Fund [RRDF] to deliver 'The Carrick on Suir Regeneration Plan – 'A Journey from the Suir Blueway to the Ormond Castle Quarter – Delivering Our Community's Ambition'. With the balance of the funding coming from Tipperary County Council's own resources the delivery of this ambitious €17.8 million project over the next few years will see enormous change in the beautiful riverside town.

Expressing his sincere thanks and congratulations to all associated with the project, the Cathaoirleach David Dunne described the level of investment as a 'game-changer' for his native town. He spoke of the huge award as an unprecedented opportunity to enable Carrick on Suir to become a commercial centre and destination in its own right, building synergies with the Suir Blueway and the historic Ormond Castle Quarter and enhancing its strategic location in the south-east region as a vibrant town in which to live and work.

Of the 23 towns receiving funding from Minister Humphrey's Department the award of €14.39 million was the largest award in the country, coming exactly 12 months since her visit to the town in November 2021 when she officially opened the upgraded River Suir Blueway and viewed the transformative plans first hand. Having expressed her support for the ambitious project on the day, she made good on her word. The Regeneration Plan was prepared by a multi-disciplinary consultant team in close collaboration with the local community and the council under phase 1, also funded through her department. We are very grateful for the vote of confidence and with planning consents in place, we are looking forward to commencing the project and delivering for Carrick on Suir.

Hi, my name is Jane Slattery and I am here to talk to you about disability.

I would like people to have an open mind in what I have to say on living with a disability.

To be honest, it has got advantages and disadvantages.

Yes, there are families out there who struggle with the fact of their loved one having a disability but help is available. Everyone needs a helping hand at times.

I myself have a disability.

Sometimes it can get me down but then I pick myself back up. Positive attitude is the key. It's all about doing fun things!

Participate in meaningful social activities, have hobbies and interests that make you feel fulfilled.

Keep a journal. I do and it's helping with my creative writing too!

I know what I want in life and I like to put my point of view across. It is enabling me to maximize my potential.

Always remember you have the best support systems out there to encourage and help you to realize yours too.

But first you need to grieve over the fact that your loved one is going through this and needs all the help you can give them.

If it means going to meetings and to have an outlook and empowerment to people.

The best thing is you don't ignore it because it can be a roller coaster at times honestly.

You don't need to put on a happy face to deal with it all . The next best thing is that you can learn to accept your disability and show your best self out.

There is always room to make the adjustments.
